

Resident Authors Book, 'The Right to Die'

At a recent Health and Law Society Luncheon, Elliott C. Winograd of Rockville Centre, counsel to the law firm of Newman Schlauf Fitch Burns & Lane, P.C., of Mineola was the featured speaker reviewing his recent book, "The Right to Die: A Review of Current Status of New York Law: The Derivation of the Principles and the Ethical Considerations: A current Review of the Laws Throughout the United States."

At the luncheon, Mr. Winograd expressed his opinion that more individuals are drawn to the view that the ultimate horror is not death but the possibility of being maintained in limbo in a sterile room, by machines controlled by strangers. In his book, he defines under current New York State Law, various terms inherent to this subject matter. He also deals with whether or not there is a constitutional right to suicide; and concludes his book by saying, "Man does not possess absolute title to his life or to his body. Man is charged with preserving, dignifying and hallowing that life. The modern phrases 'quality of life' and 'quality of existence' embody within them a concept of worthiness with connotations of personal character and social status. Evil has small beginnings. When quality of life replaces the sanctity of life, society has done itself irreparable harm."

Mr. Winograd is a nationally known trial attorney and has written for major publishing houses in the areas of medical malpractice, products liability and construction law. He also lectures for various bar associations. He is presently the Chairman of the Committee on Training the Trial Lawyer of the New York State Bar Association; Vice-Chairman of the Trial Techniques Committee of the American Bar Association; past Chairman of the Medical/Legal Committee of the Nassau County Bar Association; a member of the Board of Directors of the New York State Trial Lawyers Association (Long Island chapter); and is a member of the Defense Research Institute.

Mr. Winograd and Judge Lewis R. Friedman plan jointly to publish articles in the "New York Law Journal" under the title of "Practical Evidence for the Courtroom."
